

The platonisms of the late Antiquity: philosophical and religious interactions

Multi-year Research project

directed by

Luciana Gabriela Soares Santoprete,
Anna Van den Kerchove,
George Karamanolis,
Éric Crégheur and Dylan Burns

Principles (Archai) Series of Talks 2022-2023

Webinar

ZLATKO PLESE
TUOMAS RASIMUS
Friday, October 21, 2022
16h-18h15 (Paris time)

CHRISTOPH MARKSCHIES
JAY BREGMAN
Friday, April 14, 2023
16h-18h15 (Paris time)

M. DAVID LITWA
CAMILLE GUIGON
Friday, December 9, 2022
9h-11h15 (Paris time)

LENKA KARFIKOVA
STEFAN MARINCA
Friday, May 26, 2023
16h-18h15 (Paris time)

STEPHEN COOPER
BEATRICE BAKHOUCHE
Friday, February 10, 2023
16h-18h15 (Paris time)

The intellectual life of late antiquity is characterized by a strong concern with “principles” (archai): principles of reality, principles of the world, principles of knowledge. Regardless of how one groups intellectuals in late antiquity — into pagans and Christians, philosophers and theologians — they all speak about principles explicitly or implicitly and some of them actively seek to establish what the principles are (e.g., Plotinus, Porphyry, Origen, Damascius, Gnostics, Hermeticists, theurgists). They clearly deem the project of principles to be crucial for establishing how reality is structured, what the place of humans in the world is, what powers affect our lives, how free are we, how we can attain knowledge, and how we can attain happiness or salvation. The search for principles (understood as metaphysical or theological) is then an important issue both of itself and also for shaping ethics. The series of talks in the academic year 2022-2023 of the research project The Platonisms of the Late Antiquity will explore this topic of “principles” (archai) in its broad application in the intellectual world of late antiquity and will examine questions such as how principles account for reality, how principles explain the interaction between the divine and the human world, and how human happiness and salvation is possible given the structure of reality.

Past lecturers

- Crystal Addey (University College Cork)
- Christian Bull (Norwegian School of Theology)
- Izabela Jurasz (Centre Léon-Robin-CNRS)
- Andreea-Maria Lemnaru-Carrez (Centre Léon Robin-CNRS)
- Jean-Marc Narbonne (Université Laval)
- Andrei Timotin (EPHE-LEM)
- Dylan Burns (Université d’Amsterdam)
- Jean-Daniel Dubois (EPHE-LEM)
- George Karamanolis (Université de Vienne)
- Luciana Gabriela Soares Santoprete (CNRS-LEM)
- Anna Van den Kerchove (IPT-LEM)

To obtain the link zoom, send a message to sympa@services.cnrs.fr ; Write in message subject : subscribe lesplatonismes Leave the message body blank. You will receive a confirmation by mail.